THE BUCKEYE INSTITUTE

Following last week's Supreme Court ruling in Janus v. AFSCME, Robert Alt, president and chief executive officer at The Buckeye Institute, looked at what the ruling means for Ohio's public employees and government unions in The Columbus Dispatch (complete piece below).

Alt also had a piece in The Hill, where he wrote, "Consent matters. But you don't have to take my word for it -- just ask the Supreme Court of the United States. In Janus v. AFSCME, the Court's five-member majority held that the First Amendment protects public-sector employees -- including petitioner Mark Janus -- from being compelled 'to subsidize private speech on matters of substantial public concern' without prior affirmative consent."

Read the full Hill piece here.

The Columbus Dispatch

Janus decision protects workers who dissent from union

The Columbus Dispatch
By Robert Alt
July 1, 2018

In Janus v. American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, Council 31, the U.S. Supreme Court decided that public-sector workers must affirmatively consent before any money can be taken from them for union fees.

Since Wednesday's ruling, folks on both sides have unfortunately succumbed to hyperbolic overreaction. The most cursory recollection of our country's founding reminds us that the same idea of consent was integral to empowering the government in the first place. Accordingly, it should surprise precisely no one that the court was concerned with the compulsion aspect of the case's facts.

Plaintiff Mark Janus -- an ordinary child-support specialist at the Illinois Department of Healthcare and Family Services -- objected to paying mandatory union fees as a condition of his employment and lamented, "The union voice is not my voice. The union's fight is not my fight. But a piece of my paycheck every week goes to the union. I am not anti-union... But unions aren't a fit for everyone. And I shouldn't be forced to pay money to a union if I don't think it does a good job representing my interests."

The Supreme Court agreed with Janus that, indeed, consent matters. Common courtesy and basic human decency have always demanded it, but now -- in overruling its own 41-year-old precedent in Abood v. Detroit Board of Education -- the court found that the First Amendment requires affirmative consent when it comes to paying union fees, too.

English the second of the seco

Writing for a five-member majority, Justice Samuel Alito raised the court's objection to public employees being forced to financially support their unions, "even if they choose not to join and strongly object to the positions the union takes." Such an arrangement, Alito concluded, "violates the free speech rights of nonmembers by compelling them to subsidize private speech on matters of substantial public concern."

Unions will continue to serve their consenting members for generations to come -- only now they will do so more effectively, more efficiently and without trampling the constitutional rights of their members.

Any Ohio unions worried that Janus and other subsequent right-to-work laws will catalyze the end of unions and union membership can rest easy. Empirical studies and data from right-to-work states, including our neighbors Indiana and Michigan, demonstrate that even after enacting right-to-work laws, union membership not only does not suffer but often increases.

In the first full year after Indiana's right-to-work law took effect, for example, the state added 3,000 new union members. Although union membership initially fell slightly after Michigan adopted right-to-work rules in 2013, it has since recovered, accounting for 15.6 percent of all wage and salary workers in 2017 -- up from 14.4 percent in 2016 and well above the national average of 10.7 percent.

After Janus, the quality of public-sector union representation inevitably will improve. Removing coercion and requiring affirmative consent will incentivize union leaders to be more responsive to the needs and desires of their union members, which will increase the value of union membership by refocusing the union's attention on increasing job satisfaction and working conditions for members.

Happier and better-served union members who have affirmatively consented to their union membership should be our shared end goal across the political spectrum.

Public-sector workers won the long-overdue right to be respected, irrespective of their individual decisions regarding union membership. And, in a nation founded upon the consent of the governed, the standard of consent adopted by the Supreme Court in Janus finally gives our hardworking public servants the voice and choice they have always deserved.

Robert Alt is the president and chief executive officer of The Buckeye Institute in Columbus.

Rotunda Rumblings

Just due it: A "right-to-work" advocacy group has threatened Ohio with a lawsuit if it doesn't immediately stop collecting union dues from non-union state workers. But cleveland.com's Jeremy Pelzer reports that the agency that handles payroll for state employees hasn't taken any action so far in response to the June 27 U.S. Supreme Court decision in Janus v. AFSCME.

Moving forward: Supporters of a proposed November ballot issue that would set new standards for dialysis treatment and cap what for-profit clinics can charge submitted more than 475,000 signatures Wednesday, cleveland.com's Kaylee Remington reports.

Also moving forward: Supporters of the "Neighborhood Safety, Drug Treatment and Rehabilitation Amendment" also submitted more than 730,000 signatures on Wednesday in hopes of making the November ballot, cleveland.com's Jackie Borchardt writes. The proposed amendment would reduce penalties for individuals convicted of nonviolent drug and drug paraphernalia possession crimes and direct the cost savings to addiction treatment and crime victim programs. The secretary of state's office has until July 24 to certify each proposed amendment collected at least 305,591 valid signatures.

All aboard: Columbus will have Ohio's first self-driving shuttles by December, writes cleveland.com's Laura Hancock. The city, state and Ohio State University are seeking proposals for companies that can operate a shuttle service downtown.

Back from the dead? The Libertarian Party of Ohio has filed petitions this week to regain Ohio "minor-party" status for the first time since the 2014 election. As Pelzer explains, if the party can get on the ballot this year, it's likely to run Columbus filmmaker (and anti-Gov. John Kasich satirical group founder) Travis Irvine for governor.

Jordan fights back: U.S. Rep. Jim Jordan, in an interview with reporters on the Fourth of July in Fremont, Ohio, again disputed claims that he knew Ohio State wrestlers had been sexually abused by a team doctor.

Cleveland.com's Sabrina Eaton rounds up the latest in the nationally publicized story, including Jordan's assertion that an ex-wrestler making the accusations has sent him harassing emails.

Inside the Statehouse: Ohio officials laid the first cornerstone for the Ohio Statehouse 171 years ago. Cleveland.com's Laura Hancock shows the building's rich history with 16 images.

He's running: Literally. Cleveland.com's Seth Richardson caught up (no easy task) to Republican Attorney General Mike DeWine on the Fourth of July doing one of the things he loves best: marching in parades.

Richardson has an entertaining time-lapse video of DeWine logging nearly 8,500 steps before noon. The GOP gubernatorial nominee was of course accompanied by his wife, Fran, handing out her legendary cookbook.

Where are they now? The status of about 2,300 former students from the shuttered Electronic Classroom of Tomorrow is unknown, the Associated Press reveals. Many students from the controversial online charter school transferred to other schools, but the state doesn't know what happened to the rest, the AP reports.

No reply: "Records show more than 200 courts across Ohio failed to respond to Gov. John Kasich's executive order seeking more information on their history with the national background check database used in stopping gun-related crimes," reports Julie Carr Smyth of the AP. Those that didn't respond were mostly small mayor's courts, the report says.

Kasich, the anti-Trump: The governor is out with another op-ed, this time decrying President Donald Trump's trade war. The piece appears in the Financial Times.

Unfinished business: Ohio lawmakers sent a lot of bills to Gov. John Kasich before they took a summer break. But they left some high-profile legislation hanging, reports Carr Smyth of the Associated Press. That includes payday loan restrictions and a controversial "stand your ground" bill.

Preventive measures: The Washington Post looked at the case of the 4,000 eggs and embryos that were lost at the University Hospitals fertility center. The Post report features an interview with Ohio Sen. Joe Schiavoni who is working on a bill "he hopes will help prevent such disasters in the future and introduce penalties for fertility clinics that violate the new safeguards," Post reporter Ariana Eunjung Cha writes.

For what ailes you: If you're wondering whether your illness would qualify you for legal medicinal marijuana in Ohio, Borchardt created a handy list of medical conditions.

Full Disclosure

Five things we learned from the April 9 financial disclosure statement of state Rep. Jeff Rezabek, a Dayton Republican who is resigning to become a Montgomery County Juvenile Court judge. Gov. John Kasich appointed him to the new post Monday.

- 1. Rezabek reported earning $25,000 to $49,999 last year as an attorney in private practice licensed in Ohio and New York. He made $65,476 as a lawmaker, according to the Ohio Treasurer's office.
- 2. At some time in 2017, he owed at least $1,000 to Nelnet, Fifth Third Bank, Day Air Credit Union, Bank of America, Credit First, N.A. and U.S. Bank. His campaign committee, Citizens for Rezabek, owed him at least $1,000 at some point last year.
- 3. The Ohio House reimbursed him $3,197.38 for mileage between home and Columbus. The Ohio Judicial Conference gave Rezabek $173.25 for a hotel room during its annual meeting in Columbus, when he participated in a legislative panel. The Ohio House Republican Organizational Committee paid for $133.40 in travel. The Ohio Chamber of Commerce paid for his $69 lodging at its Policy Conference at Salt Fork in September. The Campaign for Fair Sentencing of Youth paid $487.40 for his hotel, meals and flight to a conference last year.
- 4. He received an unspecified gift from Virginia Ragan, a prominent Republican donor, worth at least $75.
- 5. School Choice Ohio Inc. paid $33.66 for Rezabek to attend a "lunch and learn" session March 30, 2017. He received at least one Dayton Dragons baseball ticket last year, worth $20.97, from the Dayton Development Coalition. He also received $58 in food at a Dayton Dragons game from the Dayton Area Chamber of Commerce.

WHERE EDUCATION REFORM GOES FROM HERE

By Michael J. Petrilli

Performance frameworks should account for student mobility

By Rob Kremer and Matt Wicks

Could education technology plus student motivation yield game-changing results?

By Adam Tyner

Where education reform goes from here By Michael J. Petrilli

After two decades of mostly-forward movement and many big wins, the last few years have been a tough patch for education reform. But this is no time to declare defeat. It's not just that America's children, especially those growing up in poverty, depend on us to improve their schools dramatically, lest they be sentenced to a life of low-wage jobs and lagging social mobility. Or that the country will continue to suffer from political and socioeconomic divisions and dwindling global competitiveness if we don't better prepare young people for brighter futures. It's also that we might be throwing in the towel prematurely. Read more.

Performance frameworks should account for student mobility By Rob Kremer and Matt Wicks

There's been much debate in education policy circles of late about whether it's appropriate for states and charter authorizers to base school accountability actions solely upon the performance ratings derived from states 50 ESSA accountability frameworks. The authors of this essay, who both work at Pearson, strongly favor this framework-based approach. States should take care, however, to ensure that their systems accurately measure the performance of all types of schools. Recent research indicates that key metrics in those accountability frameworks—especially student-growth calculations—can be inaccurate when applied to schools with high levels of student mobility, due to the fact that many youngsters experience temporary achievement declines when they change schools. Could education technology plus student motivation yield game-changing results?

By Adam Tyner

In a 2014 TED Talk, David Ray, the former dean of the University of Oklahoma Honors College, reflects frankly on his nearly forty years of experience teaching undergraduates with a range of motivation, and touches on the importance of drive. Though many students may be working hard at other things—taking multiple jobs to support families or to pay for ever higher tuition—Dr. Ray argues convincingly that students are working much less on their studies than in the past. But education reform, especially with advances in education technology, can help fix that. Read more.

Has the high school diploma lost all meaning?
By Brandon L. Wright

Late last year, an NPR affiliate threw cold water on a D.C. high school's putative success in graduating 64 percent of its seniors and earning every senior, regardless of whether they graduated, college acceptance. More than half of those cap-and-gown-wearers tallied at least sixty days of unexcused school absences, and the school's test scores indicated that its students were seriously unprepared for higher education. But this isn't a unique case. It's an extreme example of a nationwide trend in which we've simultaneously lowered the bar for high school graduation of the nationwide rate is at an all-time high—while pushing for more high school graduates to attend college. It's absurd and untenable, and things must change. Read more.

STUDY

Can school accountability policies improve working conditions?

By Aaron Churchill

A—F school rating systems are hotly debated across the country. Proponents usually argue that they provide clear information that parents and communities can easily digest, while also motivating schools to improve. Critics often claim that such blunt ratings blur key elements of school performance and can damage schools' reputations and demoralize educators. A recent study by Rebecca Dizon-Ross examines the impacts of A—F school accountability in New York City on teacher turnover and quality, as estimated by value added measures. It finds, among other things, that the city's policy reforms reduced teacher turnover and likely increased teacher quality in the city's lowest-rated schools. Read more.

Evaluating Tennessee's school-turnaround effortsBy Jessica Poiner

Since 2012, Tennessee has taken a unique approach to intervening in struggling schools. With the goal of turning around the lowest-performing 5 percent of schools, officials introduced two separate models: the Achievement School District and Innovation Zones. The former is a staterun district that directly manages some low-performing schools and turns over others to select charter management organizations; the latter are clusters of struggling schools that remain under district control but are granted greater autonomy and financial support to implement interventions. A new study examines the impacts of both initiatives after five years of implementation. Overall, the results for ASD schools were disappointing, but those of iZone schools were positive. Read more.

Access to gifted education is a social justice issue

By Rudy Crew

The world is beset by inequality, argues the president of Medgar Evers College. But education leaders can help mitigate this by creating a more level playing field that enables minority and low-income students to be identified and served in gifted education programs. There are lots of disadvantaged students? 4children of color, children whose first language is not English, children living in poverty—who can't access gifted programs. Some don't know about them, others are unfairly and inaccurately viewed as unqualified. But many of these children have latent abilities that may never be realized. Developing them and encouraging more and better identification can help change that. Read more.

FLYPAPER | JULY 6, 2018 Don't jump for JanusBy Dale Chu

The recent Janus ruling was one of the most significant by the U.S. Supreme Court in years, especially with regard to education. Conservatives generally celebrated the outcome, but it's wrong to suppose that it will lead to unions' demise. Yes, the high court's striking down of agency fees will result in fewer members and less money. But unions will still have collective bargaining rights and, as a result, much continued influence in education politics at the local level. Read more.

Ohio's dual credit landscape: A primer By Jessica Poiner

With college tuition at an all-time high, Ohio families are increasingly interested in finding ways to save on costs. Dual credit is a promising solution because it offers students the chance to earn high school and college credits simultaneously. The state has a plethora of dual-credit options, but some are better known to families than others. This article gives a quick overview of the three types of Ohio offerings: awarded credit, transcripted credit, and articulated credit. Read more.

The phoniest statistic in education By Robert Pondiscio

There's no evidence that high school students are any better prepared than they used to be. They're just graduating in higher numbers. If states and districts want to claim credit for this meteoric rise, the onus is on them to prove that their diplomas are worth more than the paper they're printed on.

The case for maximum state flexibility on ESSA accountability By Michael J. Petrilli

Public comments about regulations that might be "helpful or necessary" to ESSA implementation are due to the Department of Education by January 21. The agency should ask itself at every turn: Is additional regulatory language absolutely necessary? There's no "one best system" for school accountability, so we shouldn't close off good ideas that the states might develop now or in the future.

OHIO'S ECONOMY ENDS 2015 ON HIGH NOTE

December's jobs report is positive overall, but energy sector is reeling

COLUMBUS, OHIO--Ohio's labor market enjoyed a strong finish to 2015. Total employment rose by 15,000 jobs, the largest one-month increase since January. However, jobs numbers for the mining sector, which includes oil and gas, reflect the negative impact of low commodity prices and costly regulations.

"December marks the third consecutive month of labor force participation rate increases," said Joe Nichols, a policy analyst at The Buckeye Institute's Economic Research Center. "Employment grew strongly in the final month of the year. However, the good news did not impact everyone as the mining sector experienced more layoffs and is down 11.5% from the previous year. Oil, gas, and coal are in dire straits. In 2016, policymakers should be careful not to kick this industry while it's down. Despite hard times, the energy industry holds plenty of promise for Ohio if bad policy doesn't get in its way."

Nationally, right-to-work states continue to outperform forced unionization states (including Ohio) in private sector employment, growing by 9.8% compared to 7.9% in forced union states.

Overall, Ohio had a total of 5,451,500 workers holding jobs that paid wages or salaries in December, according to federal data.

Volume #85, Report #54 -- Monday, March 21, 2016 Energy Companies Remain Hopeful For March Ruling On PPAs

For more than a year and a half, AEP and FirstEnergy have waited for the Public Utilities Commission's orders on their controversial Power Purchase Agreements - decisions that have been expected to be made in the first quarter of 2016.

But with just one more meeting of the PUCO scheduled for this month, it's possible the wait for one or both decisions could stretch into the second quarter.

The PUCO is scheduled to meet just once more this month - a March 30 meeting for which the agenda has not yet been finalized. The commission will not meet March 23.

Whether the agenda will include one or both cases hasn't yet been determined, but PUCO spokesman Matt Schilling said any belief the ruling will come in the first quarter has been conjecture.

"For what it's worth the commission's never indicated when a decision may be," Mr. Schilling said. "There is lots of speculation out there, but we don't know."

The companies involved and their opponents have been anticipating first quarter orders. Should a decision not come in two weeks' time, the cases a year and a half or more in the making would be poised to continue.

The utilities are hopeful a decision arrives sooner, rather than later. In FirstEnergy's case, for example, the company has two energy auctions scheduled in April under the Electric Security Plan scheduled to begin June 1.

"So we're very hopeful we can get an order in this case so we can proceed with these auctions," spokesman Doug Colafella said. "Because as of June 1, we don't have power supply purchased for our customers.

"I think everyone is hopeful a decision may come as of next meeting. But obviously it's up to commission to put it on the agenda."

AEP spokeswoman Tammy Ridout said the company is "hopeful the commission will issue an order quickly."

"They have all the evidence in hand and we think they should approve the settlement agreement we've proposed," she said. "It's been a long process and we're ready for it to move forward."
